Sum Shui Po Good Uncle

Ming Gor came to Hong Kong from China when he was young. He only has primary education and he was poor. He wanted to be a rich man. So he worked hard in a restaurant and became a boss of his own restaurant "Pei Ho Restaurant". He did his job for ten years but he could not earn much money because his food was too cheap for the poor people.

In 2011, he was under pressure because he needed to give additional 20,000 dollars to his staff since the government started the lowest salary policy. He wanted to close his restaurant, but he was worried about the poor people who could not have food at low price. Later, Hong Kong government gave 6,000 dollars to all Hong Kong people. Twenty young people gave their 6,000 dollars to Ming Gor and asked him to provide lunch box for the poor people in Sum Shui Po. At the beginning, they gave the food to the poor people once a month. Six months later, they had 200 volunteers for the activity.

Now many people know Ming Gor's "Pei Ho Restaurant". He promises he will never increase food price of his own restaurant. He provides the lunch box for the poor people in Sum Shui Po every Saturday. Ming Gor wants to do the same in other places.

I think Ming Gor is a good man. When I grow up, I will help the poor just like him!
